FAQs about your blue spruce seedling

How big will it get?
At maturity, the blue spruce will reach 50-80 feet high and 25-35 feet wide.

How fast will it grow?
Your blue spruce will be busy establishing roots for the first year. After that it will grow 6-12 inches a year with fair to good care, and up to 2 feet a year with great care!

Where should I plant my seedling?
Plant at least 20 feet from your house in a place that gets as much sun as possible and in well-draining soil. Be sure not to plant the seedling under any power lines.

How should I care for my seedling?
Your blue spruce will thrive with moderate water levels in well-draining soil and with a yearly application of tree fertilizer in the spring.
